Dennis Maple is the president of ARAMARK Education, which is located in Philadelphia, Pa., and is responsible for the overall direction and management of more than 14,000 employees.

Founded in 1936, ARAMARK provides a complete range of food, nutrition, facility and other support services to more than 500 K-12 school districts in the United States. Prior to his current position, Maple served as executive vice president of ARAMARK Education, Facility Services. He has experience in sales, field marketing, market development, and operations at Kraft-General Foods, Pepsi-Cola, Coors Brewing Company, and Quaker Oats Company.

Maple is a native of Memphis, Tenn. He received his bachelor’s in business administration from the University of Tennessee in 1982 and throughout his career has participated in and contributed to organizations such as the March of Dimes, the Thurgood Marshall Scholarship Fund, the Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, St. Jude’s Children’s Hospital, and One Hundred Black Men of America.

A member of the E. J Ourso College of Business Dean’s Advisory Council, Maple also serves on the board of the Philadelphia Chapter of Outward Bound, an organization dedicated to the development of young people. Additionally, he is a member of the board of Philadelphia Academies, whose mission is to expand life and economic options for Philadelphia public school students, and the board of trustees of the Paoli Hospital Foundation. Maple is also an affiliate of the Executive Council at New York University’s Metropolitan Center for Urban Education.

The LSU Flores MBA Distinguished Speaker Series affords students opportunities to gain insight into the ideas and forces shaping American and international business from industry leaders responsible for creating and utilizing such driving forces on a daily basis. Interaction with these executives provides significant educational enrichment and complements the program’s standard curriculum. All DSS events are at 10:00 a.m. at the Energy & Coast Auditorium on the LSU main campus.