Jim Richardson is the John Rhea Alumni Professor of Economics and director of the E. J. Ourso College of Business’ Public Administration Institute, a position he has held since 1984. Richardson’s research interests include State and Local Taxation, Economic Forecasting, Energy Economics, and State and Regional Economics. He has had major papers published in the National Tax Journal and the Municipal Finance Journal regarding tax and budgeting issues following a natural disaster.

Richardson, who earned a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Michigan, has served on the Advisory Council for the GulfGov Research Project, a study of the recovery role and capacity of state and local jurisdictions damaged by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. He also dedicates time to the Louisiana Revenue Estimating Conference since 1987, the conference that determines the official state revenue estimates. Additionally, Richardson is the editor of Louisiana Taxation: Finding Permanent Solutions to Recurring Budget Crises and co-editor of the Handbook on Taxation. Richardson’s research interests include State and Local Taxation, Economic Forecasting, Energy Economics, and State and Regional Economics. He has held a position he has held since 1984.

Richardson has had major papers published in the National Tax Journal and the Municipal Finance Journal regarding tax and budgeting issues following a natural disaster.

Richardson’s research interests include State and Local Taxation, Economic Forecasting, Energy Economics, and State and Regional Economics. He has held a position he has held since 1984.

Richardson is the John Rhea Alumni Professor of Economics and director of the E. J. Ourso College of Business’ Public Administration Institute.